Academic Computing and Media

If you ever use technology at CSUSB, you have to thank CSUSB's Academic and Computing Media (AMC) for the ease of use and intuitiveness of csusb.edu along with all the other technological services on campus.

AMC's Creative Media Services offers many on campus amenities that can help you with technology for learning. If you are an individual with disabilities the Assistive Computing Resource Center (ACRC) provides assistive technology and software to students, faculty and staff on the CSUSB campus to offset learning barriers that may occur due to a disability. If you need this assistance, ACRC provides training, technical support and workshops to help individuals maintain their competitive edge in school and daily living.

In order to use the services that ACRC offers, your disability needs to be verified through, and you need to be enrolled with, Services to Students with Disabilities (SSD).
