Abstract

This project is aimed to assist the video game community in helping users interact with each other to enhance their knowledge on specific topics. Video games expose the competitive nature in each person, which in turn leads to brainstorming strategies and attempting to take hold of any advantage that is at their disposal. This is all done in an attempt to gain skill on a topic that is of great interest. I plan to build a website forum where these gamers are able to interact with each other posting guides, tips, and tricks in a variety of different video games. This forum will have a hierarchy including administrators/moderators and regular users. Each user will have their own account in order to distinguish between levels of authority. All posts will be saved on a secure cloud database as well as users credentials. This project will allow for a better community experience where users can express their passion for video games.
