Expect more from your career

The roles and responsibilities of procurement specialists and managers have considerably grown in the past decade. There is now a significantly more complex set of expectations placed on professionals in the field. It has now become critical to have the educational background to handle these changes. This is exactly what the Management Certificate in Public Procurement (MCP) seeks to do – to provide you with the perspectives, knowledge and the education needed to remain competitive and progress in your procurement careers.

If you seek to enter the field or if you are already working in the field and seek promotion or if you are a manager looking to expand your qualifications – this certificate is for you. The MCP is an excellent credential to keep your career progressing.
