

WEBINAR

Leveraging New State & Federal Funds for Educator Diversity

Wednesday, November 17, 2021

11:00am - 12:00pm PST

About

With the historic amount of funding for K-12 initiatives, California's education system has a unique opportunity to strategically support a more diverse and sustainable workforce, while also addressing the state's dire teacher shortages. UCLA's Center for the Transformation of Schools will be hosting an informative webinar on how to leverage state and federal funds to support the recruitment and retention of teachers of color. This session will look at teacher residencies, classified pathways, and national board certification as avenues for diversity. This is a great opportunity for K-12 administrators to gain valuable insight into effective approaches to program spending, resource allocation and design.

Speakers

Dr. Tyrone Howard

Faculty Director,
UCLA Center for the
Transformation of Schools

Dr. Kai Mathews

Director, CA Educator Diversity
Project, UCLA Center for the
Transformation of Schools

Geetha Lakshminarayanan

Director, Stanford National Board
Resource Center (NBRC)

Karen Escalante

Assistant Professor, Teacher Education and Foundation, California State University, San Bernardino; California Council on Teacher Education (CCTE) Board of Directors

Carl Williams

President of the Council of Classified
Employees, California Federation of Teachers (CFT)

RSVP

tinyurl.com/educatordiversitywebinar

UCLA

Center for the Transformation of Schools