WRPI Community Water Internship

Must be enrolled as a full-time student at eligible institutions to apply and be considered for this internship opportunity

To build and strengthen relationships with overburdened and underrepresented communities in the Santa Ana River Watershed, the Community Water Internship joins college students with public agencies and 501c3 nonprofit organizations to assist with engagement, public affairs, and education projects or programs.

The California State University (CSU) and the Santa Ana Watershed Project Authority (SAWPA) are responsible for the program, and the CSU Water Resources and Policy Initiatives (WRPI) administers it.

The Community Water Internship is supported through SAWPA’s Disadvantaged Communities Involvement (DCI) Program using Proposition 1 funding from the California Department of Water Resources (DWR). The DCI Program ensures that people who live in disadvantaged or underrepresented communities and economically distressed areas are involved in Integrated Regional Water Management planning. Over three years, program team members will gather a broad understanding of communities’ strengths and needs, build familiarity between water stakeholders and community members, and ensure that solutions to previously documented and newly discovered needs are identified and given opportunities for future implementation funding.

By funding students to work on projects related to community engagement and water management, the Community Water Internship provides students professional experience and connects them with career opportunities related to water management planning, environmental sustainability, and community organizing. As students are drawn from local CSU campuses and community colleges, the internship also supports members of the Santa Ana River Watershed to be engaged with watershed health and water management. Public agencies and 501c3 nonprofits located within the Santa Ana River Watershed are eligible to have pairs of interns assist with a project or program.

The DCI Program grant provides $4,500 for undergraduate students for a total internship of 360 hours at $12.50/hour. Graduate student stipends are funded at $4,500 for 300 hours at $15.00/hour. Students can work no more than 20 hours/week while in school and no more than 40 hours/week during breaks. Students may not work more than 8 hours/day or more than 6 days in a row. Students are allocated up to $560 per internship for supplies and materials, including local transportation, needed to complete their projects (to be approved by advisors). No single item may exceed $500, including tax.

Students from all academic departments can apply. Students must be in or entering their second years at a college campus to be eligible. A 3.0 grade point average is required to apply, but students may still ask to be considered if their GPAs do not meet this standard.

Before applying, all students should review the list of projects that have already been approved, although this may not be the complete list of available projects. If you are uncertain about the details of a specific project or have other internship questions, please contact Mike Antos, SAWPA watershed manager (mantos@sawpa.org), or Christina Rodriguez, WRPI internship manager (chrodrig@csusb.edu).
Interns will meet with all Community Water Internship cohort members from various agencies on predetermined dates during the internship for an orientation, trainings on topics related to water management, and a closing internship event. These meetings, as well as biweekly check-in calls, will be organized by CivicSpark: Water fellows working at SAWPA or by dedicated program staff. Each intern will submit a two-page final report in digital format to the CSU WRPI detailing the water-related community engagement, public affairs, or community education activity undertaken.

Students must submit the following application, unofficial transcripts, the Supplies Order Form (if applicable), Release of Liability Form, and the Informed Consent for Data Collection Document (if you agree).
