

Risk / Hazards / Safety

CSUSB Adventure trips and program may occur in remote areas. Communication and transportation can be difficult. Equipment may fail or malfunction. Some environmental safety things to look out for are over rugged unpredictable off-trail terrain, boulder fields, falling or rolling rocks, snow and ice, steep slopes, river crossings, dangerous animals and more. Weather may change to extreme conditions without notice. Many possible injuries and illnesses may occur on a trip, including hypothermia, frostbite, high altitude sickness, sunburn, heatstroke, dehydration, and other mild or serious conditions.

Everyone on this trip must make a conscious effort at all times to be safe. You must always stick with the group, or let someone know where you are going. One person's disregard for safety will result in hardship for the whole group. If we do have an accident or injury that requires medical attention beyond the abilities of our leaders' experience, the trip is immediately over without refund. Our leaders are certified in CPR and First Aid.

CSUSB Adventure, its volunteers and employees assume no liability for any damages arising from outings. All participants will be required to sign in a waiver and release. Please note that our trips are alcohol, smoking, tobacco, and illegal substance free. Weather, water levels, trail conditions, roads closures, and fires can change any trip with little warning. We appreciate the patience, understanding and flexibility of all parties involved in our outings. If changes need to be made we will update our information in a timely manner and will always notify registered participants as soon as possible.

CSUSB Adventure is not responsible for any lost, damaged, or stolen gear. All CSUSB Adventure trips and programs are alcohol, tobacco, and illegal substance free.
