Correctional educators help to transform asocial, nonsocial and anti-social persons who are ready to become social community members.

“Probably no element of the correctional education scene is more negative, more lacking, than that of professional status.” -Reagen and Stoughton

Teaching “Inside”

To accomplish their high aims correctional educators establish, maintain, and consistently refine their repertoire of effective strategies to promote student learning and growth – and their own personal/professional learning and growth. Correctional educators are on the front line of the human drive to live in alignment with community aspirations. They must consequently be equipped and ready to motivate and facilitate. If these ideas sound good to you because you are ready to learn more about correctional and alternative education, Center faculty are ready to work with you; “we’re all in this together.”

Professional Development Academy

The Academy is aimed at improving the profession by providing professional development recertifying activities for educational and ancillary staff who serve adjudicated and at-risk students in institutional and alternative instructional settings.

Specifically, the Academy provides teachers and ancillary staff with the appropriate information, skills and understanding to enable them to meet these challenges with confidence and compassion.

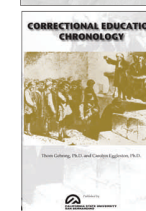

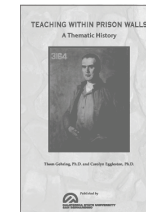

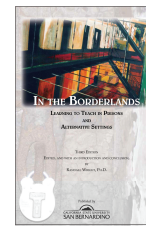

Correctional Education Publication Series

In 2006 the Center began publishing textbooks related to correctional education. These texts are the result of years of study and expertise from Center faculty and represent the only contemporary set of useful correctional education texts. We welcome ideas and suggestions for future volumes from practitioners.

These books are used as texts in the CSUSB correctional and alternative education Masters degree program, and are also valuable resources for inservice, professional development, and other college level courses.

"The mere tools of education are no guaranty of character. A man may carry a kit of burglar's tools and a doctor's degree at the same time."
-Glenn Frank

The Center for the Study of Correctional Education is the only organization of its kind working to support teachers and education administrators who work in confinement institutions and alternative settings worldwide. The Center offers professional development, program evaluation, research-related services, a Masters degree program in correctional and alternative education, textbook publishing through the University, and actively seeks to connect educators with the rich history and traditions of the field.

Founded in 1992, the Center houses the most complete collection of correctional education related literature anywhere in the world, as well as the only complete collection of The Journal of Correctional Education. Through collaboration with educators across the US and several foreign countries, the Center promotes:

- The Council of Europe's Recommendations on Education in Prison
- The adoption of administrative configurations that empower educators to make educational decisions
- Professionalization of the field
- Increased inmate access to educational opportunities
