TRAFFIC STUDY
Cal State San Bernardino seeks transportation solutions

The U.S. Department of Transportation has chosen Cal State San Bernardino's William and Barbara Leonard Transportation Center (LTC) as one of the 18 universities throughout the United States to lead newly established "Beyond Traffic" Innovation Centers.

CSUSB was designated to lead the effort for Southern California. Regional centers have been recognized by the DOT as "forward-thinking and influential institutions that are capable of driving solutions to the nation's transportation challenges." CSUSB will be expected to convene both private and public decision-makers in Southern California's transportation sector, facilitate the development of consistent and far-reaching regional strategies and priorities and coordinate related research, curriculum, outreach and other activities. The designation is the result of the university's work last year with the DOT that culminated in a visit by the Secretary of Transportation to the CSUSB campus last October to describe the need for the program and assess CSUSB's approach to regional governance.

CSUSB's Leonard Transportation Center is led by Kimberly Collins and Thomas McWenney, both faculty members in CSUSB's department of public administration. Collins serves as the LTC executive director and will direct the newly-designated center.

McWenney will continue to assist Collins at the new regional innovation center and will serve as the center's associate director while working out of CSUSB's Palm Desert Campus.
The work of the new DOT innovation center will extend not only to Riverside and San Bernardino counties, but to Los Angeles, Ventura, Orange and Imperial counties.
